

The Mary Lamb Antique Sampler Reproduction Pattern: An 1806 Early American Sampler

Yet another early American needlepoint sampler that Susan Bradford has arranged to provide a reproduction pattern for. This important and unique American art form is readily recognized and documented as part of the American experience. Susan Bradford has provided a reproduction pattern for the Mary Lamb cross stitch Sampler. The original sampler was cross stitched in 1806 by 15 year old Mary Lamb. This important and authentic piece of early American textile art is now available in a reproduction pattern to be stitched and enjoyed today. The reproduced pattern is presented here, along with photographs to help with completing this project. Susan has included detailed instructions with the pattern in order that the original stitching of the Lamb sampler may be accurately reproduced. As with each of her antique sampler reproduction patterns, Susan has included a brief history of the young stitcher and her family. Young Marys sampler itself gives a number of hints regarding her life and times. Taking Mary Lambs stitches from her original sampler work into a pattern was definitely a challenge. Mary stitched a rather large sampler and used a variety of stitches to complete her sampler. Before starting your work be sure to take time to note the instructions Susan has included.
