

The Future of P2P Finance

Peer-to-Peer (P2P) finance is one of the fastest growing and most dynamic fields in modern banking, powered by the Internet and made possible through ubiquitous social networking. Lenders love it because it promises both higher rates of return and a lower number of defaults. Borrowers love it because it makes a loan easier to obtain and less expensive. Yet it is far from a panacea and there are many challenges ahead. Morten Lund and Alexander Haislip take an in-depth look at the opportunities and challenges for this bleeding-edge financial technology in this e-brief. Lund is a prolific seed investor and the backer of transformative companies such as Skype. Haislip is the author of Essentials of Venture Capital. Learn where there's money to be made and avoid investor pitfalls.
